FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Connecting Evansville to those around the world seeking guidance in spiritual journeys Internet ministry Global Media Outreach teams up with local churches

CARMEL, Ind., July 11, 2011 – Global Media Outreach (GMO), an international ministry, has teamed up with churches in Evansville, giving local congregations the opportunity to speak about Jesus with people all over the globe. Using the Internet and other emerging technologies, the Silicon Valley-based ministry helps Evansville residents reach people around the world without ever having to leave the city.

“We are the first generation to have the Gospel at our fingertips with the emergence of new technology,” said Walt Wilson, GMO founder and chairman. “Having reached over 1 million people in a single day this year and with our growing online presence, we hope to give every person on earth multiple opportunities to hear about Jesus.”

In light of the recent economic downturn, GMO provides Evansville families who may not be able to afford a global mission trip the opportunity to become online missionaries, responding to individuals who have asked for information, prayer or encouragement at one of GMO’s websites.

Christian Fellowship Church and Crossroads Christian Church, both in Evansville, have teamed up with GMO as part of their Church Online Missions Program, a church-alliance collaboration that gives local congregations the chance to expand their global mission’s ministry and influence around the world. GMO can direct anonymous inquiries from seekers all over the world to the online missionaries of these congregations.

This week, GMO is opening its doors to a regional office in Carmel, Ind., which will allow the ministry to continue to team up with additional local churches and business.

“The GMO team brings expert insight into areas of outreach that are simply beyond our capacity and they do this with passionate humility,” said Todd Bussey, executive pastor of Crossroads Christian Church.

The Church Online Missions Program is available to churches of any size or denomination. Through multiple websites, GMO is able to direct online spiritual seekers to the “electronic” front doors of participating church volunteers, where they can engage with and disciple people through e-mail. The volume of daily or weekly e-mails provided to a church depends on the number of volunteers and their requested activity loads.

Since its inception in 2004, Global Media Outreach has seen the number of people indicating a decision for Christ grow from 21,066 people in 2004 to more than 15 million people in 2010.
